

Corporate Access to your Gazetteer and AddressBase

SinglePoint

Sub-second location and citizen data search engine

Irrespective of the data source and method of managing that data, the one thing that is absolutely essential to both Local Government and The Emergency services is the need for fast and accurate access. The quicker data can be accessed, the quicker it can be used effectively.

SinglePoint is a flexible, web-enabled search engine that allows the user to search their address database and return results in rapid time.

SinglePoint provides web services that give complete, corporate access to your central address database, removing the need for different departments to maintain their own data and giving the confidence that all staff will be using the same address.

These web services enable other systems to call the AddressBase® Premium data when required, acting so seamlessly that the operator will not even know the process going on beneath the surface.

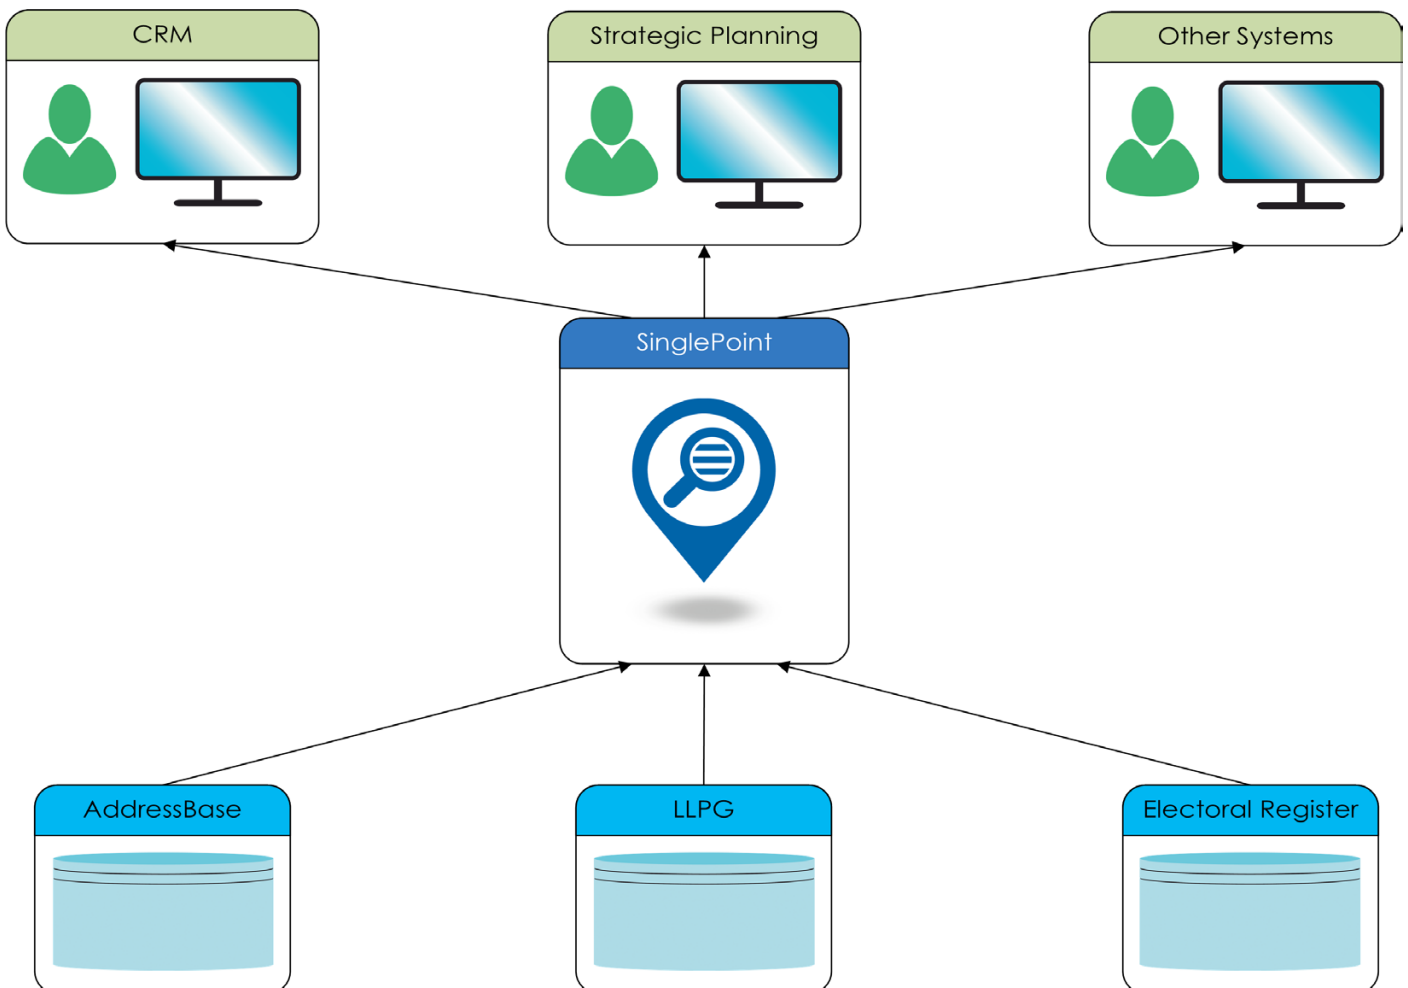

For users across an organisation, SinglePoint has a look and feel that is based on the Google search engine, primarily consisting of a simple, one line search bar in which the search terms are entered. It allows for 'wildcard searches' if the user is unsure of the complete search term and 'fuzzy searches' that means words will be found even if misspelt.

SinglePoint is not just a search engine for addresses however and through the use of our 'adaptor' technology it can be used to search other databases alongside your addresses. This includes the ability to search for both names and addresses.
